LOGLINE

HANDS THAT PLAY, AND HANDS THAT STRIKE

To buy back an antique dombra pawned by his alcoholic father, and to perform in the final of the TV music competition Talent, a young dombra virtuoso is forced into the cage of brutal underground bare-knuckle fights.

FOR PRODUCERS

THIS STORY IS SET IN ALMATY

THE SCRIPT IS NOT TIED TO A CITY

A TV studio, a pawnshop, an old garage, an underground fight club, a teacher’s apartment. Across 121 pages there is not a single Moscow street. Only the character names change.

OUR HERO

Alex is of mixed Kazakh and Russian descent. A boy from a residential district who plays Kurmangazy’s kuis on the dombra and hits like a champion. The face of young people in Kazakhstan and Central Asia.

AN INTERNATIONAL PROJECT

A universal story of a father and son, of music and fighting. Export-level fight scenes and sound, sales on world markets and at festivals.

SYNOPSIS

TWO GIFTS. ONE DOMBRA.

Eighteen-year-old Alex has two exceptional gifts: he plays the dombra with genius, and he can knock out any opponent in the ring. Five years ago he quit sport after his father, a former coach, traded his son's world championship for alcohol.

Salvation comes through music, under the wing of his wise mentor Yan Borisovich, who gives him a priceless dombra made by a great master in 1720.

Alex dazzles his way through the qualifying rounds of the TV show Talent, winning over the audience and the stern judge, pop star Anna Prazdnik. His main rival is Anton, a technically flawless virtuoso and the son of a media magnate who is trying to prove his right to music to his father.

Alex's world collapses when his drunken father pawns the dombra. To buy back the instrument and play his teacher's dombra in the show's final, Alex makes a desperate decision.

Through the cynical Anton, who sees a way to profit from his rival, Alex enters a brutal underground bare-knuckle tournament under the name "Talent." The winner's prize is exactly 60 million tenge, the price of buying back the dombra.

Two fronts, intercut: the stage and the cage converge in one finale. A tuxedo over a battered body, a dombra in bandaged fingers.

WHAT SETS IT APART

A CLASH OF WORLDS

MUSIC AGAINST BLOOD

An unprecedented collision of the ancient voice of the dombra, the refined world of music and television glamour, with the ultraviolence of underground arenas.

THE MUSICAL CODE

Iconic songs by Viktor Tsoi and the band Kino: “Kukushka (The Cuckoo),” “Peremen (Change)” and “A Sad Song,” in modern arrangements with a rap collaboration. Songs that people in Kazakhstan know by heart.

NATIVE BRAND INTEGRATION

Real brands woven organically into the drama: a TV show, a music label and a fight promotion.

THE WORLD OF THE FILM

STILLS

Hands that play, and hands that strike.

Yan Borisovich and the 1720 dombra.

The old garage. Father is a coach again.

Anna Prazdnik. The only “yes” that matters.

The Bull. The tournament final.

The final of the Talent show. Walking out to the dombra.

TONE, STYLE, AUDIENCE

WHIPLASH × THE RAID × WARRIOR

TONE AND STYLE

The drive and psychological tension of Whiplash, the uncompromising brutality of The Raid, the family drama of Warrior.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Men and women aged 16 to 60. Worlds that seem incompatible, the ancient music of the dombra and bare-knuckle fights, plus sports action, romance and family drama unite several audience segments.

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Men are drawn in by spectacular bouts, the adrenaline and the hero’s fight for his dream. Women by the romance, emotional depth, family ties and the hero’s fate.
